

Tips on creating your own unique pattern for embroidering (including embroidering on your knitted cloths)

Make a realistic basis for your design. Find pictures of the artists who paint nature. Get some tracing paper ready at hand. You can copy several interesting images of the plants to separate pieces of tracing paper and then play with them trying to compose a picture. When you make a composition that looks nice to you, copy it to a whole sheet of paper. This is a really interesting work!

Be free when you choose your color. It is very important that each plant you use in your picture has a color of its own. Let one stem be turquoise, next one light -green and so on. Then each plant will have an individual spectrum and sing "its own song" in the picture. This will make it visible. It is not so important that the colors match the natural coloring - the more they are away from real colors, the more interesting the picture looks!
